

I am commenting in opposition to RM-10352. Allocating spectrum to CW is contrary to efficient use of the 160M band. This is especially true considering CW is one of the lesser used modes and, regrettably, becoming more so as time passes. CW is unlikely to advance much technically going forward. Digital modulation techniques, however, are the cutting edge of communications and require bandwidth for experimentation and advancement of data and voice technologies.